

SEVEN NEW ANIMALS HERE FOR ZOO AND EACH IS QUEER

Tarip and Gibbon Odd, but Black Leopard Inspires Most Fear

Seven new animals, all of them rare, have been given permanent lodgings in the Philadelphia Zoo.

The addition to the collections came from India and the Malay peninsula via San Francisco. They were sent in the express office. Eighteenth and Market streets, yesterday by C. Emerson Brown, curator of the Zoo. Also in them was a two-year-old orang-outang called Tuan Tuan, who is holding the curator for the best time, as he is full of delight, that he does not in his haste to get away, to greet his mother with wrapped arms tightly about Mr. Brown's shoulders, and would no account be persuaded to release them. Mr. Brown had a blanket put over the little fellow and carried him to his new home.

The others were taken to the Zoo in motorcars. Two of the two who have come from Asia are anthropoid relatives of ours called the silver gibbon, the first is a male, the other a female; a Malayan tapir, which can best be described as a pig with a chameleonic habit; among which last is guaranteed to trounce the children, since, according to Mr. Brown, it has already frightened the keeper assigned to him.
